Beer Production

Beer is made from four ingredients: malted grain, water, hops and yeast. The idea is to extract the sugars from grains so that the yeast can turn it into alcohol and CO₂, creating beer, hops are added for flavour and aroma.

Altering the ingredients during the brewing process even slightly, can have a dramatic impact to the overall flavour and style.

1. Milling & Mashing

Malted grain is gently crushed and added with hot water to a mash tun. This breaks down the malt's starch into sugars which are easier for the yeast to convert. The product is then known as the 'mash'.

2. Lautering

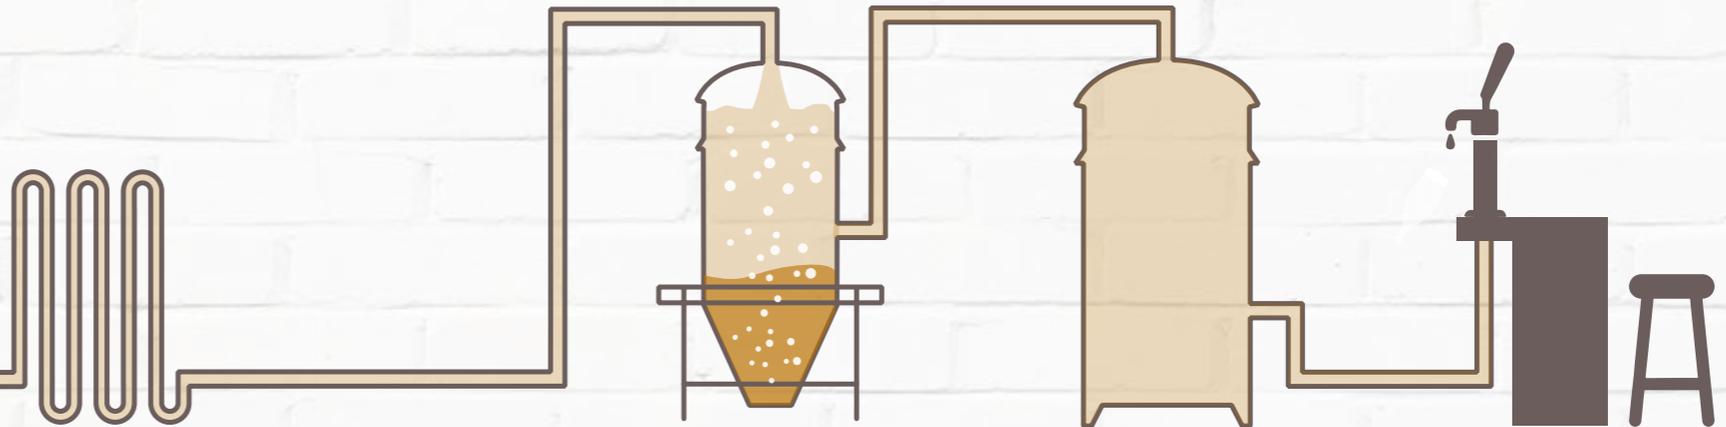

The mash is then pumped into the lauter tun, where the sweet liquid (known as wort) is separated from the grain husks.

3. Boiling

The wort is then boiled in the brew kettle. Hops are added to contribute additional flavours and aromas.

4. Separation & Cooling

After boiling, the wort is transferred into a whirlpool for the wort separation stage. During this stage, any malt or hop particles are removed to leave a liquid that is ready to be cooled and fermented.

5. Fermenting

As the fermenter is filled, yeast is added. The yeast consumes the sugars in the wort and produces alcohol and carbon dioxide. Different strains yeast will produce different flavours.

6. Maturing

The fermented beer is transferred to the maturing tanks where the beer settles and any sediment drops to the bottom.

7. Filtering

The beer is filtered in order to remove all solid particles, if desired.

8. Packaging

The beer is packaged in bottles, cans and kegs for shipping. It is then ready to be poured, savoured and enjoyed."

IPA

The addition of high levels of hops in order to preserve the beer for long journeys to India in the late 1700's was just the start of this hugely diverse, popular style. Flavour is hop forward with a dry finish.

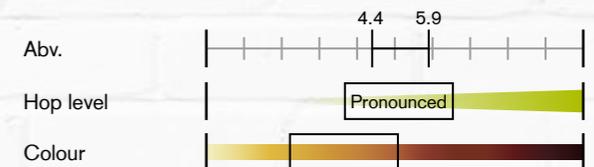

Lager

First brewed in the 1870's light in body, colour and crisp. Medium to high hop bitterness with a clean refreshing finish that's become the most popular style the world over.

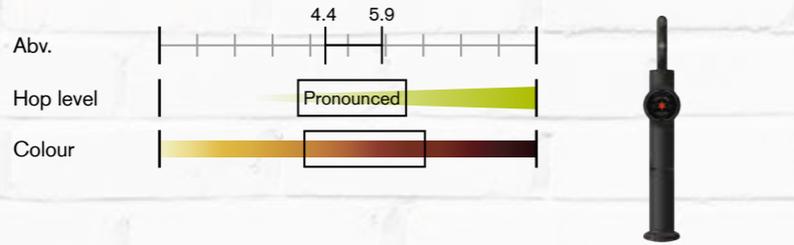

Pale Ale

Before the rise of IPA this style was, and still is hugely popular, with less hop character than an IPA, a malty backbone and typically New World or American hops.

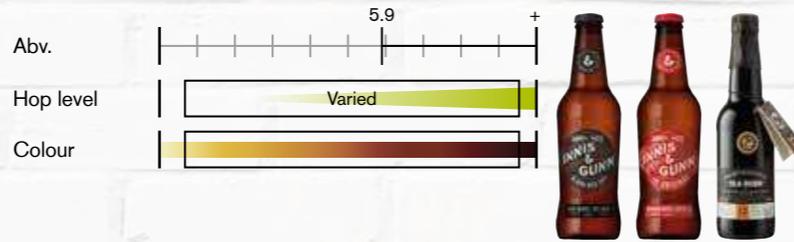

Amber

Typically, same hopping levels as Pale Ales but has a lower bitterness due to the bigger malt flavour and character. Crystal malts are often used to provide colour and a caramel sweetness.

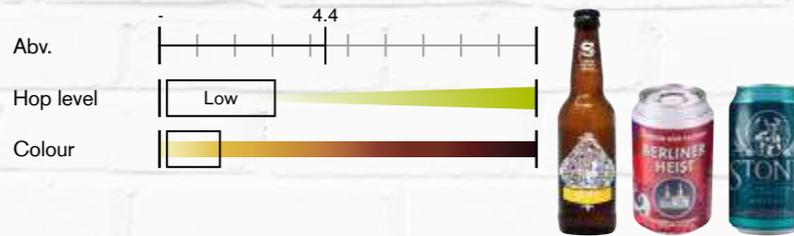

Barrel Aged

Beers produced as described as 'aged in barrels', typically whiskey or rum barrels to impart unique flavours such as vanilla or caramel. Not fixed to any style or ABV.

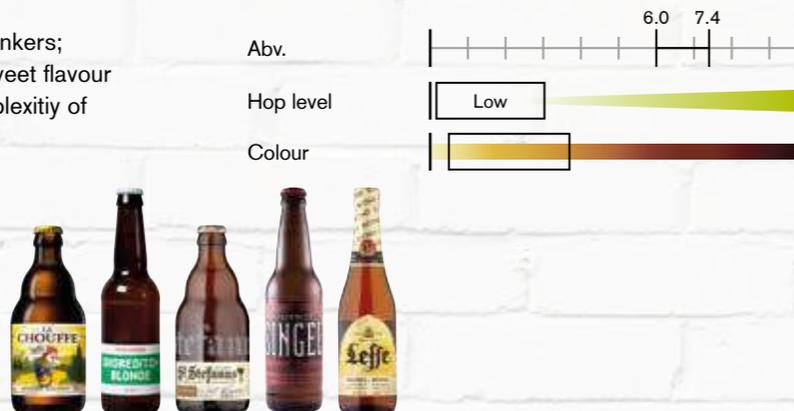

Berliner Weisse

Speciality of Berlin and referred to as the "Champagne of the North" by Napoleons troops. Fermented with Lactobacillus to provide a sharp sourness. High carbonation with a clean finish.

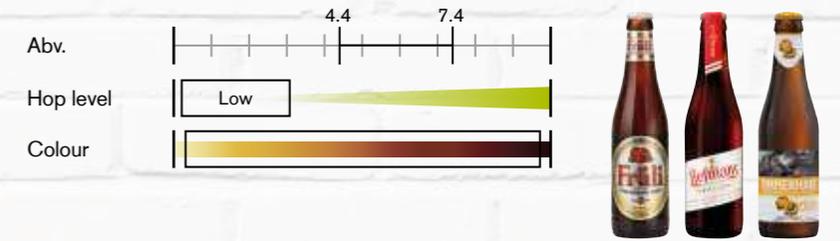

Blonde

Created to appeal to European Pils drinkers; this Belgian style has a subtle malty sweet flavour with a dry finish created from the complexity of Belgian yeast.

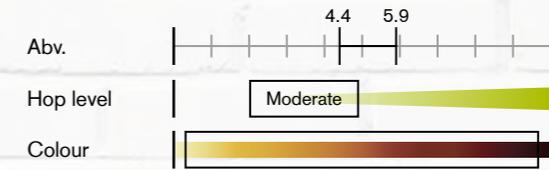

Fruit

Real fruits are added to the barrels during fermentation; when allowed to mature they add sour, sharp tangy fruit flavours. Strawberry and Cherry are among the most popular fruits used.

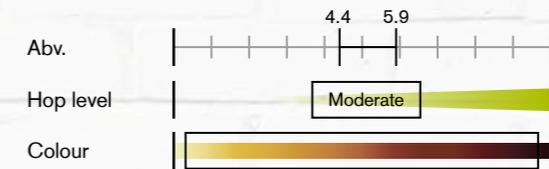

Fruit IPA

Much like the IPA style but with the addition of fruit to create a tropical, fruity fresh taste. Often citrus or soft flesh fruits are used to create a sweeter, less hop forward beer.

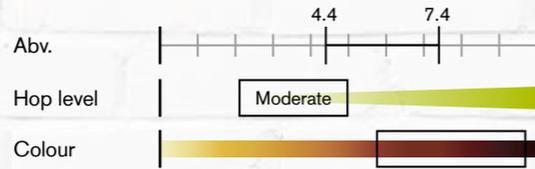

Fruit Pale Ale

Much like the Pale Ale style but with the addition of fruit to create a tropical, fruity fresh taste. Often citrus or soft flesh fruits are used to create a sweeter, softer beer.

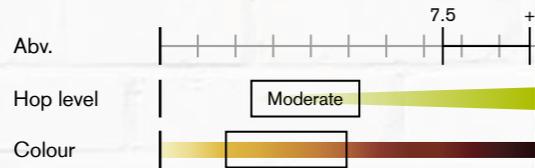

Brown

With a malty, caramel character and slight sweetness this dark brown beer has a low hop profile and dry finish.

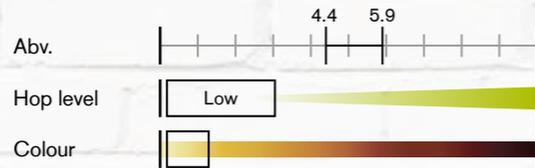

Golden

Developed after WWII by the Moortgat brewery, this beer features fruity and hoppy notes. Carbonation is high and extremely effervescent.

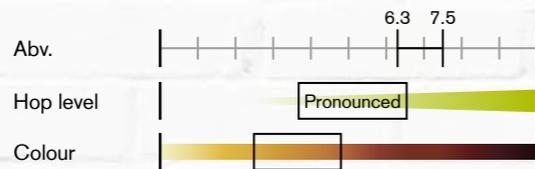

Gose

From the German town of Goslar, this beer is highly carbonated, fruity and tart. Often has coriander and salt character, low bitterness and very refreshing and dry.

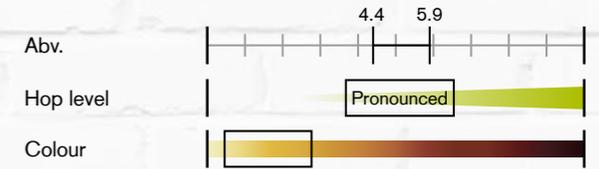

NE IPA

The New England IPA leans heavily on late and dry hopping techniques to deliver a bursting juicy, tropical hop experience. The balance of ingredient selection, often including the addition of wheat or oats, lends an alluring haze to this popular take on the American IPA.

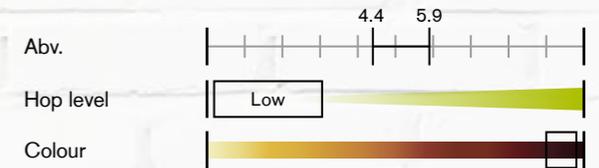

Pilsner

Originally brewed in the town of Pilsen, Czech Republic; this beer typically uses Saaz hops. Rounded in flavour, floral and herbal aroma with a rich bready finish.

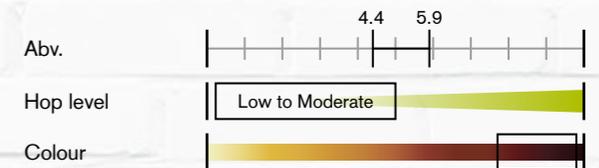

Porter

Favourite of the London dockland and railway porters from which the name came, this style is dark with pronounced flavours of roasted coffee and chocolate.

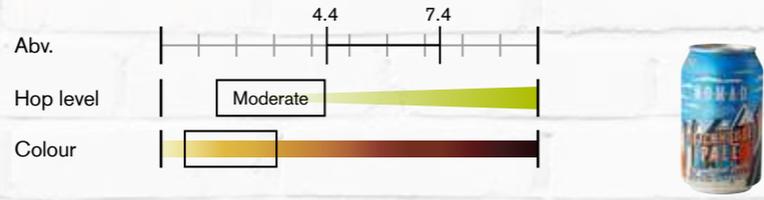

Stout

Can be produced with the addition of lactose or oats. Stout is sweet, full bodied with a low hop bitterness. Black in colour due to the dark speciality or roasted malts used.

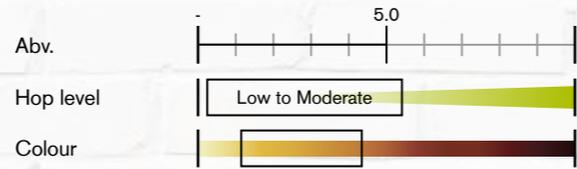

Saison

Originally brewed during the winter to be enjoyed in the summer by the farm workers of Northern Belgium. Traditionally low in ABV this style has grown in popularity, it can also be known as a Farmhouse Ale. With a peppery/spicy aroma and high carbonation. A refreshing beer with flavours of orange or lemon.

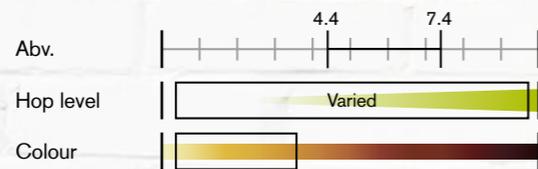

Session IPA

Session beer is not defined by flavours or aromas. Instead, what makes a session beer is primarily refreshment and drinkability. Any style of beer can be made lower in strength than described in the classic style. The goal should be to reach a balance between the style and the lower alcohol content.

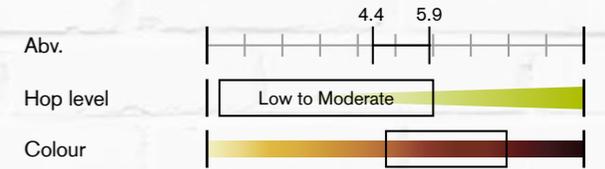

Sour

As the name describes this beers are soured through the addition of organic acids, either in the mash or during fermentation. Clean, sharp and surprisingly refreshing.

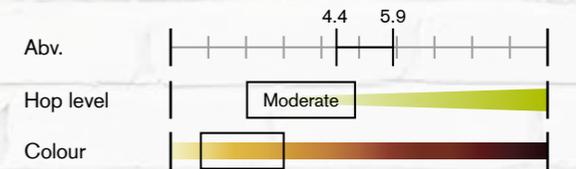

Red Ale

A balanced beer that uses a moderate amount of malt and roasted barley in the recipe, which gives the beer the colour from which it is named. An approachable hop bitterness which rests on the palate, this typically amber-colored beer is brewed as a lager or an ale, and can often have a medium, candy-like caramel malt sweetness.

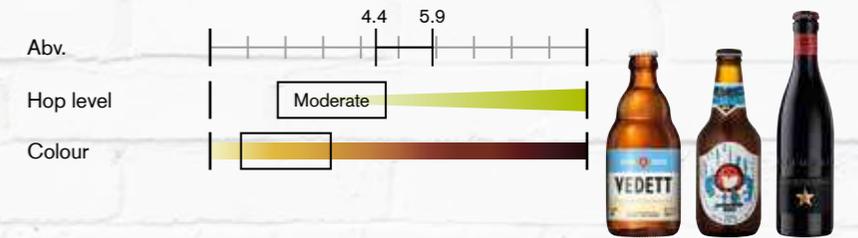

Wheat

Adapted from the German style, with a clean yeast profile. With a doughy or bready wheat flavour. Well blanaced with a low hop profile.

Witbier

A Belgian style with over 400 years' history. Most commonly spiced with fresh coriander and citrus peel along with 50% unmalted wheat. A great summer beer with a malty sweet flavour and a crisp, dry finish.

England

From the IPA's that were created to travel the seas to British colonies, to the porters enjoyed by 19th century transportation workers of London, it's clear that England has a diverse history of beer production.

This has continued to modern day, with a huge choice of styles from brewers all over the country highlighted in our Boutique Beers range.

Netherlands

While pale lager makes up the majority of beer production and consumption in the Netherlands, (95% according to the Centraal Brouwerij Kantoor), most Dutch brewers also brew specials.

The Netherlands exports the largest proportion of beer of any country in the world - approximately 50% of production. In the early days, beers were brewed with botanicals rather than hops to give flavour. What's more, as Dutch seafarers travelled the world, the botanicals they traded and the beer styles they brewed, became all the more exotic.

40% make a conscious effort to go without alcohol for long periods of time.

56% of consumers would consider low/no alcohol alternatives

Gluten Free

With consumer diets changing and the ever increasing need to offer your consumers choice, we have a carefully selected range of gluten free beers from the UK and beyond.

There are two ways to make a gluten free beer. Some beers are made with Non Gluten Containing Ingredients (NGCI) such as sorghum, maize, rice, buckwheat etc. The more modern method is to brew beer in the normal traditional way using barley and oats (generally not wheat) and use a process to reduce the gluten content to below 20 parts per million.

Only foods that contain 20 parts per million (ppm) or less can be labelled as 'gluten-free'

Beer and Food

When you think about beer and food it's easy to think lager and burgers, stout and oysters but it goes much further. With food occasions being one of the main reasons people head out it's important to not only get the offering right but benefit from a perfectly matched offering through awareness and promotion.

Matching beer with food is not an exact science as we all taste and smell differently due to our varied palates, but following 3 simple rules you can guide yourself to matching heaven. If a match doesn't work, try another beer—there will be an element of trial and error.

Cut

This is using the beer to cut through the food you are eating, to cleanse the palate before the next bite through the carbonation. For example, the bitterness of an IPA would cut through the fatty richness of pork belly.

Complement

We want to match the flavours and character of the beer with the flavours of the food to enhance the overall taste experience. For example Porters and Stouts go great with chocolate, because of the deep rich flavours of both.

Contrast

The idea here is to match opposing flavours of beer and food to create unique flavours. For example the bitterness and alcohol of a Double IPA would contrast the fat and salt of blue cheese.

In each case you need to think about the intensity, sweetness, bitterness and carbonation of the beer to best match the food, for example high carbonated beers can irritate the chili burn of spicy food and a Stout would overpower a white fish dish.

To help you navigate through the maze of combinations we have put together this handy chart to get you started:

Glassware

So what's in a beer glass? Hopefully beer, but there's much more to be found.

We know that serving good quality beer in a branded glass is proven to enhance the consumer drinking experience.

As soon as the beer hits the glass, visual receptors tune in and anticipation is tweaked. Hidden nuances become more pronounced, colours shimmer and the enjoyment of the beer simply becomes a better, more complete experience.

Branded glassware isn't just a way of presenting good quality beer in the best way.

Scientific studies show that the shape of glassware will impact head development and retention. The foam created by pouring a beer, acts as a net for many of the volatiles in a beer. Volatiles are compounds that evaporate from beer to create its aroma, such as hop oils, all kinds of yeast fermentation by-products like alcohol, fusels and fruity esters, spices or other additions. A glass that promotes a healthy foam head may enhance the trapping of certain volatiles.

Presentation marries science - customers believe that a drink served in branded glassware is a sign of a quality beer, with the shape of the glassware enhancing the beer.

That's why we can provide you with our Boutique Beers glassware when you buy products from our range, alternatively our suppliers can support your outlet with branded glassware.

For more details, or to order glassware please speak to your Account Manager.

2.2 The Supplier's acceptance of the Order is subject to the availability of the Products and shall take place at the time the Products are dispatched for delivery or are made available for collection, at which point a Contract shall be formed.

2.3 The Supplier reserves the right to reject an Order if it does not fulfil the Supplier's minimum order value (which may be imposed by the Supplier from time to time).

2.4 These Terms apply to the Contract to the exclusion of any other terms that the Customer may seek to impose or incorporate (including, without limitation, any terms on the Customer's order form or similar document) or which may be implied by trade, custom, practice or course of dealing.

2.5 Unless the Supplier expressly elects otherwise, any Contract between it and the Customer for the supply of Products shall remain in existence notwithstanding any exercise by the Supplier of its rights under clauses 9, 10.1.1 or 11.

3 Delivery

3.1 Delivery of the Products shall be completed once the Products are unloaded by the Supplier at the Customer's premises or agreed place of delivery (where the Supplier arranges transport) or once the Products are loaded by the Customer or its agent (where the Customer arranges collection of the Products).

3.5 The Supplier reserves the right to deliver the Products in instalments at its sole discretion. Each instalment shall be invoiced, paid for separately and shall constitute a separate Contract. Any delay in delivery or defect in an instalment shall not entitle the Customer to cancel any other instalment or Contract.

3.6 The Supplier may during any periods of shortage due to causes beyond its control, supply the Products on a pro rata basis among its customers in such a manner as may be deemed equitable in the sole judgement of the Supplier and without any liability.

3.7 The Customer shall immediately inspect the Products on delivery and shall be entitled to reject any Products that have been delivered in excess or in error or which are damaged, missing or out of date, provided that the Customer endorses the delivery document at the time of delivery.

3.8 Unless inspected, notified and rejected by the Customer pursuant to clause 3.7, all Products delivered shall be deemed accepted and the Contract shall be treated as fully performed by the Supplier.

3.9 Except as set out in clause 3.7, if the Customer refuses or fails to take delivery of the Products or, where the Customer or its agent is to collect the Products from the Supplier and has not done so within three working days after the agreed collection date, the Supplier will be entitled to (at its sole discretion) store the Products at the risk of the Customer and the Customer shall in addition to the price payable under the Contract, pay for all related costs and expenses of such storage and redelivery (including, without limitation, insurance and carriage).

4 Title and Risk

4.1 The risk in the Products shall pass to the Customer on completion of delivery in accordance with clause 3.1 and shall be and remain at the Customer's risk at all times unless and until the Supplier has retaken possession of them.

4.2 The Supplier shall retain title to and ownership of all Products, until, subject to clause 5, it has received payment in full of all sums due from the Customer. If payments received from the Customer are not stated to refer to a particular invoice the Supplier may appropriate such payments to any outstanding invoice.

4.3 Until title in the Products passes to the Customer pursuant to clause 4.2, it may resell the Products in the ordinary course of its business (but not otherwise) provided always that the Customer shall hold in trust and to the extent that any monies are owed by the Customer, pay to the Supplier on demand any proceeds of sale. The Customer shall resell the Products as principal and not as agent of the Supplier.

4.4 Until their resale the Customer shall hold the Products in satisfactory condition as the Supplier's bailee, keep them secure, separate from any other products and identifiable as the Supplier's property and shall not charge, pledge or deal with them or allow any lien or other interest to arise over them.

5 Containers and Dispense Equipment

5.1 The Customer acknowledges that delivery of the Products may include Containers and Dispense Equipment and title in such Containers and Dispense Equipment shall not pass to the Customer.

5.2 The Customer must at all times ensure that:

5.2.1 all empty Containers are made available for collection by the Supplier or its agent and such collection may take place at any time and without notice. The Supplier shall not be liable for any storage, handling or other charges for Containers awaiting collection; and

The Supplier reserves the right to charge for any Containers and/or Dispense Equipment which are not returned, or are returned damaged or in a poor or unusable condition, or are only returned after an unreasonable delay.

6 Price

6.1 The price payable for the Products (excluding Products supplied for export) shall be as stated in the Supplier's current price list at the date of delivery unless otherwise agreed in writing by the Supplier.

6.2 Any price quotation provided by the Supplier shall not constitute an offer and is only valid for a period of 14 working days from its date of issue after which the Supplier may alter such quotation (or any part of it) without notice to the Customer.

6.3 All prices stated by the Supplier (whether generally or in any Customer specific documentation) are subject to alteration without prior notice and will be reviewed by the Supplier at least once in each calendar year. In particular (and without limiting the foregoing) prices are subject to alteration to reflect changes to supplier pricing, supply chain, duties, taxes, levies, import costs, transport costs, fuel costs, customs clearances and/or foreign exchange rates.

6.4 The Customer acknowledges that there may be errors on any pricing notified by the Supplier and where this is the case, the Supplier shall provide a corrected invoice to the Customer rectifying any error. The Customer shall be responsible for settling such invoice in the normal manner and in accordance with these Terms.

6.5 Subject to clause 6.6, and unless otherwise agreed in writing by the Supplier, the price of the Products is inclusive of all duties, standard packaging and delivery, and exclusive of any special inspection or delivery requirements, any additional transportation costs imposed by law and value added tax, all of which shall be for the account of the Customer.

6.6 Where Products are supplied under bond, the Customer shall be responsible for any duties. Where Products are supplied for export, the Supplier's published export price list shall apply which excludes all costs of export. The Supplier's sole responsibility is to make the Products available to the Customer at the chosen delivery destination. All risk in the Products shall pass to the Customer after they leave the Supplier's premises and Section 32(3) of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 shall not apply. Responsibility for the customs clearance, duties and complying with all laws and regulations governing the importation, handling, use and re-sale of the Products shall be borne by the Customer.

7 Payment

7.1 The Supplier may invoice the Customer at any time before delivery or collection of the Products and the Customer shall make payment in pounds sterling in cleared funds prior to the date of such delivery or collection to the account stated in the Supplier invoice. The Customer acknowledges that any amounts due to the Customer by the Supplier shall not affect the Customer's obligations under this clause 7.

7.2 All amounts due to the Supplier shall be paid in full by the Customer without any set-off, counterclaim, deduction or withholding (other than any deduction or withholding of tax as required by law). Time for payment shall be of the essence of the Contract.

7.3 All amounts payable by the Customer under the Contract are exclusive of amounts in respect of value added tax chargeable from time to time ("VAT"). Where any taxable supply for VAT purposes is made under the Contract by the Supplier to the Customer, the Customer shall, on receipt of a valid VAT invoice from the Supplier, pay to the Supplier such additional amounts in respect of VAT as is chargeable on the supply of the Products at the same time as payment is due for the Products.

8 Credit Accounts

8.1 The Supplier may, at its sole discretion, establish a credit account for the Customer. A credit account shall only become operational after the Supplier has confirmed in writing that such a facility will be available to the Customer and shall be subject to any additional terms and conditions notified by the Supplier. The Supplier shall be entitled, at its sole discretion, to refuse or at any time withdraw a credit account without giving reason.

8.2 If the Customer has a credit account pursuant to clause 8.1, the Customer shall make payment in full for the Products in pounds sterling and in cleared funds in accordance with the credit terms and on the date set out in the Supplier invoice. The Supplier shall be entitled to invoice the Customer for each Order at any time after delivery or collection of the Products.

9 Non-Payment

9.1 The Customer must immediately notify the Supplier in writing if it disputes an invoice and shall continue to pay the undisputed portion of such invoice in accordance with clauses 7 and 8.

9.2 If the Customer fails to make any payment when due to the Supplier in accordance with these Terms (save where any invoice is disputed by the Customer in accordance with clause 9.1), then without prejudice to the Supplier's other rights, the Customer shall pay interest on the overdue amount at the rate of 8% per annum above the Bank of England's base rate. Interest shall accrue on a daily basis from the due date until payment of the overdue amount whether before or after judgment and the Customer shall pay the interest together with the overdue amount.

9.3 Any discounts given to the Customer are subject to payment being made on or before the date specified by the Supplier. In the event of late payment the Supplier shall be entitled to remove any discounts (including those applied on any other Orders) and re-invoice the Customer for the Products at the full price stated in the Supplier's then current price list.

9.4 Any cheques or direct debits unpaid or returned by the Customer's bank shall be subject to additional charges as may be notified by the Supplier from time to time. The Supplier reserves the right to request on demand any alternative form of payment or to cancel any accounts and terms. The Customer shall indemnify the Supplier in full against all fees, costs and expenses incurred in seeking to recover such sums payable by the Customer and/or in repossessing Products belonging to the Supplier.

9.5 If payment is to be made by instalments, the failure of the Customer to pay any instalment in due time shall entitle the Supplier to treat such failure as a repudiation of the whole Contract by the Customer and to recover damages for breach of Contract and the full balance outstanding on any account between the Supplier and the Customer shall become immediately payable.

9.6 The Supplier reserves the right at any time to set off any sum due to the Supplier from the Customer against any amount due to the Customer from the Supplier.

10.2 Upon suspension or cancellation of an Order or termination of a Contract, the Customer shall immediately pay to the Supplier all of the Supplier's outstanding unpaid invoices and interest and, in respect of Products supplied but for which no invoice has been submitted, the Supplier shall submit an invoice, which shall be payable by the Customer immediately on receipt.
